

I am definitely against relaxing the rules of media ownership. If anything, we should have more rules that prevent corporations like Clear Channel from monopolizing the airwaves. Just look at the statistics on their web site: <http://www.clearchannel.com/radio/> . ClearChannel programming reaches 54% of all people ages 18-49 in the U.S DAILY! That's too much power! We need diversity in programming, and we won't get it by giving corporations even more opportunities to monopolize the media. Please, please, please, don't relax the rules. If you care about the people of this country, this democracy, you can't relax the rules. We need a diverse media that represents a diverse range of voices.

Thanks
